Malala history

Malala was born in a small family. She was very interested in studies. But, some people in her country didn't allow education for girls.

In 2012 she was shot by a gunman on her school bus at Swat because she stood up for girls education.

She survived and went to England to recover, but she was not afraid to speak out for girls education.

Malala made a speech to the United Nations on her 16th birthday. She said, "One child, one teacher, one book and one pen can change the world".

We watched the speech in our computer lab and I am reading her book, 'I Am Malala'.

Malala was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize and Sakharov prize.

Malala is a very brave and not fearful girl.
